TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction 5

PART ONE: MULTILINGUALISM AND LANGUAGE CONTACT

Zofia Chłopek, Conceptual transfer in the trilingual mind: The case of object categorization 9

Matthias Wolny, Use and functions of plurilingual repertoires in immigrant networks. Some evidence from Venice (Italy) 27

Teresa Maria Włosowicz, Some remarks on the representation of words in the multilingual mental lexicon 39

PART TWO: IN THE LEARNING CONTEXT

Oleksandr Kapranov, Self-evaluation of speech fluency in English as a second language by Korean exchange students studying in Sweden 61

Beata Kouhan, Exploring the assessment network at a foreign language course in the Polish upper secondary school and the British sixth form college – the results of the comparative research 77

Agnieszka Piątek, Teaching and learning phrasal verbs – how linguistic research can help us master the complex networks of their multiple senses 93

PART THREE: STUDYING LANGUAGE

Leszek Szymański, Considering the World-Wide Web for empirical language research 113

Krzysztof Kosecki, On polysemy and semantic networks in signed languages 123

Živilė Nemickienė, Linguistic networks of slogan stylistics in re-branding 137

Karolina Rosiak, The use of diminutives in the context of recent revitalisation efforts in Wales 149

Ahmad Izadi, Viva voce: The network between institution and talk 161

Joanna Kapica-Curzytek, Global English: creating new dimensions of network societies 167

Jacek Rachfał, What the castle has in store 179

Edyta Rachfał, Crisis communication or communication crisis? The news of the world hacking scandal: A pragmatic study of crisis communication 199

Gian Claudio Batic, Sergio Baldi, 'My heart is black, your belly is white': Encoding emotions in a West African Culture 213